RESEARCH SAYS

- According to the California Department of Public Health nearly 60% of students in southern California have experienced trauma. Trauma is referred to stress from an adverse childhood experience. Many students in California have one or more adverse childhood experience.
- School connectedness is associated with better school attendance, retention, and test scores, and lower rates of emotional problems, substance abuse and other risky behaviors (CDC, 2014).
- Schools can foster student connectedness promoting caring and supportive relationships (O'Malley & Amarillas, 2012).
- School Counselors develop unique and valuable relationships with students. When students feel connected to their schools (i.e., they feel treated fairly, close to people), they are more likely to succeed academically and engage in healthy behaviors.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR MENTAL HEALTH

- Counseling programs are more effective than AVID. AVID students are 1.5 times more likely to complete four year college entrance requirements than their non-avid peers (AVID, 2017). However when a student has access to their school counselor and a comprehensive program aligned with the national standards, they are seven times more likely to attend college (Reach Higher, 2017).
- Currently CA 2nd to last in Counselor ratios 800-1 (www.schoolcounselor.org)
- School Counselors can provide services such as :
  - Classroom lessons in academics, college, career, social/emotional
  - Small Group Counseling in academics, college, career, social/emotional
  - Individual Counseling in academics, college, career, social/emotional
- Increase # of School Counselors (PPS)
  - School Counselors offer counseling in academics, college, career, social/emotional
  - Not limited like MFT, LCPP to only social/emotional counseling
